

WELCOME TO
DEAR, BLACK GIRL!

Hi,
I'm Kendall

Thank you for registering!

In 2020, my mentor, Cordelia, asked me to share a little about how I felt after the Breonna Taylor decision. I told her being a Black girl in America feels scary.

From that conversation, we created Dear, Black Girl! a free and safe space for Black and Brown girls to be seen, heard, and validated.

DEAR, BLACK GIRL!

A recent Georgetown Law study found that Black girls, compared with white girls of the same age, are perceived to need less nurturing less protection

less support
less comfort

Daughters & Vessels has created a brave space for Black and Brown girls to just be girls. Our six-week conversation series empowers and equips Dear, Black Girl! participants to discover their identity, develop their bravery, and build lifelong relationships with other bold and blossoming girls. Participation in the Dream Team Leadership role will teach girls to create programming, manage tech, compose scripts and master their interviewing skills. Our girls will receive access to and mentorship from Black and Brown teenage girls and women leaders who are thriving.

To join the conversation, click the logos to follow Daughters & Vessels on Facebook & Youtube.

Don't forget to turn on notifications, so you know when we go live.

Dear, Black Girl! is a free program that runs through sponsorships. Our girls are excited to grow Dear, Black Girl! into a global philanthropic sisterhood that uses media to spread the message that BLACK GIRLS MATTER.

Please consider sharing our program with your network. We are currently accepting donations to support this important work. DearBlackGirl.us

Your support allows us to:

- 🍷 Provide our girls with access to transformational speakers and mentors
- 🍷 Develop the Dear, Black Girl! Show on YouTube (directed by Black and Brown girls)
- 🍷 Offer in-depth STEAM experiences virtually and in-person
- 🍷 Create a safe online space for Black and Brown girls to find community and support
- 🍷 Produce inspiring and activating content that reinforces identity, purpose, and value

All sponsorship levels will receive personalized thank you letters from our girls.

Brilliant and Brave gifts will be highlighted on the Dear, Black Girl! website and during live shows.
